

Chris Adamo 2021 Bio

Chris Adamo is Vice President at Danone North America for federal and industry affairs, assisting the world's largest B Corp with strengthening the role of business in driving social and environmental good for all. He helps Danone North America navigate a confluence of issues related to public policy, especially to help Danone sustainably grow and provide healthier options.

Prior, Chris spent over a decade at the highest levels of the U.S. government working on issues related to the agriculture, climate change and nutrition. Most recently, Chris was the chief of staff for the White House Council on Environmental Quality from 2015 until 2017 where he helped design and implement policies to mitigate and adapt to climate change, as well as manage various natural resource matters.

Previously, Chris worked for 10 years in the U.S. Senate as an advisor to various U.S. Senators, both Democrats and Republicans. He led, for example, the U.S. Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry under the leadership of Senator Debbie Stabenow as its staff director.

Chris graduated with a degree in economics and business from Kalamazoo College and a law degree from Vermont Law School.
