

Lacy Cagle is a systems-focused leader and community education facilitator. As Director of Learning at Ecochallenge.org, she developed and refined a system of high quality learning programs that inspire sustainability action and advocacy, and cultivated Ecochallenge.org's thought leadership on behavior change, systems thinking, and education for sustainability. In addition to her work at Ecochallenge.org, Lacy is a partner at Blackrock Consulting Collaborative, teaches Foundations and Practice of Sustainability at Washington University in St. Louis, is a board member of Au Sable Institute and president of the board at Redbud, and serves on several committees for the OneSTL initiative (St. Louis regional plan for sustainable development). Lacy holds a Master's degree in Educational Leadership and Policy with a focus on Leadership in Sustainability Education from Portland State University.
