

Nikayla Jefferson is a first year PhD student in the department of political science. Her research interests include American institutional climate response and mitigation, and the implications for environmental justice. In her free time, she organizes San Diego Sunrise Movement and collects National Park pins.