

Sarah Congress bio

Sarah's passion for environmental science was cemented during her time in undergrad at DePauw University. Sarah is now a masters student at Indiana University-Bloomington pursuing a dual masters degree in public administration (MPA) and environmental science (MSES). Her concentration is in environmental systems and modeling. Sarah joined the ISDP Climate Fellows program during the summer of 2021 where she worked with Zionsville, IN to begin identifying ways to meet the goals set out in the climate action plan. When not studying for class or working with Zionsville, Sarah enjoys running, cooking, and watching IU football and basketball.
